Current Comment

Great Britain is going thru a financial crisis, second only in severity to the one encountered by Germany a few weeks ago. The Labor government has fallen and a coalition Nationalist government has taken its place. Every American, of course, hopes and believes that England will weather the storm, and get back to something approaching normalcy, even tho normalcy in England these days isn't what it used to be.

The Labor government split on the rock of economy and the dole. A budget deficit of something like $600,000,000 was disclosed. The extreme laborites wanted this made good by the imposition of more taxes. The conservatives declared that this would only further impede business recovery and that the deficit should be made good in a different way. They are said to have proposed that one fourth of the deficit be made up by additional taxes and three fourths by a reduction of expenditures, including a decrease in the dole. To this the laborites refused to agree. Premier MacDonald is said to have sought a compromise by which half of the deficit would be made up by increased taxes and half thru a reduction in government salaries and the dole. The compromise was not agreed to and the government fell. The new cabinet is to be made up of conservatives, liberals and labor leaders, with Mr. MacDonald retaining the post of premier.

Each party and each faction of the labor party had a remedy for the deficit. But there is one point which ought to strike Americans as significant, and that is that in all the programs proposed for balancing the budget there was no proposal for a reduction in the expenses of the navy or naval construction, except a recently announced reduction in enlisted men's pay. To one unacquainted with the situation it would seem that the easiest way to pare expenditures in the big navy country of the world would be to pare the naval budget. But not even the more radical laborites, those left-wingers who shout militarism to the other nations, at every opportunity, proposed a plan of balancing the budget, in part, by a reduction in the expense of the navy or in the naval building program.

Isn't there something a little significant in this? With the country already staggering under a load of taxation, needing to cut salaries and the dole of the unemployed, there is no suggestion that the problem might be solved in part by naval limitation. It is to be hoped that some of our ardent pacifists in the United States will think this over carefully. They seek from time to time to put Uncle Sam in the wrong, to show that other nations are eager and anxious to disarm, and that it is up to the United States to lead the way. Yet in France, the leading military power of the world, and in Great Britain, the leading naval power of the world, there doesn't seem to be the slightest disposition to disarm further. Even a crisis in the British budget doesn't bring such a suggestion from the supposedly pacifist left wing of the labor party. They might advocate a tariff even, but no reducing naval expenditures.

What's wrong with this picture anyhow? Somebody evidently has been feeding us some particularly unintelligent and misleading pacifist propaganda. Won't some leading professional pacifist now arise and explain the British situation to us? No such explanation will be forthcoming unless our professional pacifists can find some way to blame it all on to Uncle Sam. In which case, of course, "explanations" will be both frequent and voluminous.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

James M. Beck's Interesting Suggestions to Congress —Butler May Be G. O. P. Chairman—British Parliament in Action.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

OUR eminent statesmen are converging on Washington already in preparation for the session of congress that opens in December, and each one seems to have his own ideas of what should be done to save the nation. The remedies they are ready to propose are as various as the men themselves, and at least some of those that are not too evidently put forward for the purpose of further embarrassing an already troubled administration may be worth considering. President Hoover, it is reliably reported, hasn't yet made up his mind what is best to be done, and his cabinet members hold widely divergent views.

J. M. Beck.

James M. Beck, Republican representative from Pennsylvania, is always listened to respectfully, and now, on his return from a trip to Europe, he has a lot to say. He decided the plight was due to "excessive taxation for socialistic purposes and fears the United States is in grave danger of being led into the same road. Mr. Beck suggests that the present example of the British should be followed by the formation of a coalition leadership of Republicans and Democrats in congress for the purpose of "abolishing unnecessary and meddlesome bureaus" and effecting other economies.

The Pennsylvanian estimates that probably two billions of dollars annually could be saved by temporarily suspending sinking fund requirements and by scrapping such governmental machinery as the farm board, numerous bureaus of the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce and Labor and various commissions consecrated to paternalistic care of the citizenry in their occupations and in their homes.

He favors only one additional kind of tax. He would have congress pronounce light wines and beer nonintoxicating in fact, which he says can be done constitutionally, and then impose an excise tax mates would bring in half a billion on such beverages, which he estimates would vring in half a billion dollars of revenue annually.

NATIONAL Relief Director Gifford and his committee are as busy as bees co-ordinating the efforts of state and municipal governments to meet the job of caring for the unemployed next winter. President Hoover has added many names to the advisory board, so it now includes a great number of the country's leading men in all lines. It was believed these advisers would soon be called in session.

Labor day gave occasion for numerous expressions concerning the situation by labor leaders, cabinet members, congressmen and others. In general the dole idea was condemned, but many agreed with William Green, head of the American Federation o Labor, who asserted that work must be provided the idle by industry. Governor Murray of Oklahoma, speaking at Chicago, vehemently attacked Wall Street and the international bankers, charging them with having upset the economic structure of the country. He called for a new deal in 1932 for the laborers and common people and freer lending to the producing classes. His talk sounded as if he were suggesting himself for President, as the candidate of a new party, for he assailed Republicans and Democrats alike. So watch out for "Alfalfa Bill."

GOSSIP about national politics now includes discussion concerning the man who shall succeed Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio as chairman of the Republican national committee. It is granted that Mr. Hoover can have a renomination if he wishes it, so his choice will prevail as to the manager of the campaign. The one definite statement to date is that of the Boston Post to the effect that former Senator William M. Butler of Massachusetts has been approached by close friends of President Hoover regarding his acceptance of the place. He was chairman during the administration of President Coolidge and directed his campaign. The Post says Mr. Butler was recently a week-end guest at the Rapidan camp and recommended Charles D. Hilles for the place. It was after this that he was himself asked if he would accept the chairmanship.

W. M. Butler.

Some of the statesmen in Washington are talking of the availability of Lawrence C. Phipps, former senator from Colorado, as chairman. Those who favor him urge that his great wealth would help the committee in raising the large campaign fund that will be needed. Mr. Phipps maintains a handsome home in Washington. All this is long-distance talk, for the National committee does not meet until December, when it will choose a date and city for the 1932 convention.

THAT amazing story of the defalcations of Walter E. Wolfe, manager of the coupon department of the Continental Illinois bank of Chicago, was made almost complete by an announcement from Arthur Reynolds, chairman of the board of directors. He said that during twelve years Wolfe had stolen $3,666,929.06, which makes his embezzlement the second largest in American banking history.

The bank is covered by insurance up to $2,000,000, and a charge against special reserves for the balance of $1,666,929 was made. Mr. Reynolds stated, however, that this entire amount, over and above the insured sum, would be recovered in time.

WHILE the London bobbies with rubber batons struggled to disperse a mob of jobless men and Communists, the British parliament opened its special session called to try to balance the budget. After the usual speech from the throne had been read, Prime Minister MacDonald, head of the new national government, offered a motion that the house resolve itself into a committee of the whole for the speedy passage of the economy measures devised by the cabinet. He insisted on a division, stating the resolution was considered as a test of confidence. The result of the voting gave the government a majority of 59, the figures being 309 for and 250 against it. The Conservatives and most of the liberals lined up with MacDonald, as did twelve members of the Labor party. Sir Oswald Moseley and his "new party" were in opposition, together with Arthur Henderson's Laborites.

King George.

The economy budget, as presented by Chancellor Snowden and accepted by the house, caused groans from the Laborite benches. Its principal features, summarized, are:

Taxes.

Income—Standard rate raised six pence, bringing it to five shillings in the pound (about $1.25 in $5), or 25 per cent.

Beer—Increased one penny (two American cents) a pint.

Leaf tobacco—Increased eight pence (16 cents) a pound; other forms of tobacco proportionately.

Gasoline—Increased two pence (4 cents) a gallon.

Entertainment—Movies and legitimate theaters, increased 16 2-3 per cent.

Total new taxes this year, $202,500,000; next year $400,000,000.

Savings.

Dole—Cut 10 per cent.

Police wages—Cut to a sliding scale upward from five shillings (about $1.25) a week.

School teachers' wages—Cut 15 per cent.

Civil servants of all kinds, from cabinet ministers down—Pay cuts ranging as high as 20 per cent.

Heavy reductions in outlay for defense services, education and road fund.

An interesting incident was the announcement by King George that he desired a reduction of $250,000 in his civil list of $2,350,000, which is the annual income paid by the government to the crown.

Queen Mary and other members of the royal family joined the king's request for cuts in their parliamentary grants, and the prince of Wales, who derives his income from his duchy of Cornwall, estimated to be about $350,000 per year, announced he intended to contribute $50,000 to the national exchequer.

TROUBLE between Japan and China, always in the offing, seems to be getting nearer. The immediate reason is the shooting of Capt. Shintaro Nakamura, Japanese, as a spy by Chinese troops in Manchuria some weeks ago. The Japanese cabinet met early in the week to consider the matter and Minister of War Jiro Minami set forth the army's attitude. Recently he urged the government to take a firm stand in dealing with the Chinese rulers of Manchuria, who have sought pretexts to delay answering queries from Tokyo. The vernacular press in Japan insists on strong measures against China.

Six military planes of the Ninth division at Kanazawa dropped 100,000 handbills that called the attention of the nation to the danger of Japanese interests in Manchuria being jeopardized. This is the first time the army has taken such unusual measures. The handbills said:

"Countrymen, awaken. The national defense is endangered."

LOWELL Bayles of Springfield, Mass., who a few years ago was a miner working underground, is the new American king of the air, for he won the Thompson race at the national air races in Cleveland, making the new record of an average speed of 236 miles an hour in his Gee Bee supersportster over

Booknotes

The new fall book list, like the spring and summer announcements, shows that the business of writing, or at least of publishing, is feeling the strain of the depression. There seem to be fewer books published and there are certainly fewer good ones. . . . The field of fiction has long been overworked and it is now becoming sterile. Perhaps if it will lie fallow for a time the new spring lists might show a renewed vigor. . . . Biography still accumulates in tremendous quantities, but the subjects are becoming more serious and "dat ole davil" fictionized biography appears to be on the road to a happy extinction. . . . Speaking of biography, the most interesting include Henry Pringle's Theodore Roosevelt (Harcourt, Brace); Portraits in Miniature (reviewed in this issue) by Lytton Strachey (Harcourt, Brace) who is probably the most charming of them all as he so unquestionably proved in Queen Victoria; Classic Americans (Harcourt, Brace) by Henry Seidel Canby, which is a critical estimate of the literary "greats" of America by a writer who knows what he is talking about and writes well. . . . Dodd Mead announces biographies of Washington by Alden Arthur Knipe; of Father Damien and Brother Dutton, famous for their work on the leper colony of Molokai, by Charles J. Dutton; a new edition of Richard Wagner's autobiography; and to show that there is no one too insignificant or infamous, they announce works about Stanford White, Plutarch, Justinian, James A. Garfield, John G. Carlisle, financier, and Newton Baker. . . . Macmillan has little interesting biography to offer this fall, except Hamlin Garland's Companions of the Trail, a companion-piece to the delightful Roadside Meetings. . . . Garland, though far from an exceptional writer himself, knew every author and most public men of consequence during the last forty years, at least, and writes of them quietly, reminiscently and with a certain pensive charm from an age that is far more dead to us than the age of Swift and Pope. . . . Stefan Zweig is becoming another Emil Ludwig, though his standards still remain higher. The Viking Press announces his Healing Through the Spirit for later publication. It is a biographical study of such diverse spirits as Mesmer, Freud and Mary Baker Eddy. . . . I am of the opinion that American art and literature will soon be entering into a movement similar in spirit to the pre-Raphaelite movement in England. Thus Columbia University Press' announcement of a biography of Christina Georgina Rossetti would make a nice yard stick. . . . But I've given too much time to biography . . . . The chief item in the field of fiction is unquestionably Virginia Woolf's The Waves, announced by Harcourt, Brace. Miss Woolf is a superb stylist, and her Orlando, Mrs. Dalloway and A Room of One's Own are three of the best contemporary works I have read. . . . St. John G. Ervine's play, The First Mrs. Fraser, has been done into a novel by the author and published by Macmillan. The play was a rather amusing comedy, but had little weight, and I fail to get the least excited about its new form. . . . Macaulay announces Harry Kemp's Love Among the Cape Enders. I found it hard to put down his other two fictionized autobiographies, Tramping on Life and More Miles, though I did not like Kemp's work in either of them. There is something in his books that almost compels you to read them. . . . There is probably a lot of other fair or good fiction coming out, but the better authors seem to be in hiding, and attempting to discover the more literate new ones in the inundation is a far too tiring endeavor. . . .

ORCHARD CITY GRANGE

The Orchard City Grange met in regular session last Tuesday evening at the I. O. O. F. hall with Worthy Master W. H. Woodbury presiding over the business meeting.

The entire evening was devoted to a discussion of water conservation in the valley. Leroy Anderson, chairman of the water conservation committee, outlined the procedure for the building of dams and reservoirs to conserve the water of the valley. Sept. 22 the subject will be taken up with engineers and others who will tell more about the project.

During the lecture hour Mrs. F. M. Derrickson read two original poems, "The Call of the Big Basin," and "On the Shores of Monterey." Miss Olga Brydon entertained with several piano solos.

the 100 mile closed course. His money reward was $9,300. Among the seven rivals he beat was Maj. Jimmy Doolittle, whose achievements at the meet earned for him $10,000. Of the women flyers Mrs. Mae Haizlip of St. Louis was the biggest money winner, her share being $7,750. John Livingston of Aurora, Ill., captured six trophies and a lot of coin.

WHAT the members of the League of Nations assembly termed a "lamentable error" was rectified when the assembly met in Geneva and almost immediately adopted a resolution inviting Mexico to join the league. The first business was the election of a president, and this honor was conferred on Nikolas Titulescu of Rumania, former foreign minister and now Rumanian ambassador to Great Britain. Then the matter of Mexico was taken up.

N. Titulescu

Lord Cecil of England said the admisson of Mexico would rectify an error in the formation of the league, adding: "I must admit I personally had a part in committing this error." He said the aid of Mexico was needed in the league's efforts to solve world problems. These sentiments were echoed by M. Briand of France, Signor Grandi of Italy, Curtius of Germany and Yoshizawa of Japan, and the resolution was adopted unanimously.

While the statesmen were paying tribute to Mexico, her observer at Geneva, Martinez de Alba, walked about the auditorium smiling and shaking hands with the leading delegates. The Mexican senate accepted the invitation and cabled its action to Geneva.

FOLLOWING close on the announcement that the farm board will sell 15,000,000 bushels of its wheat to China comes the news that Germany is dickering for the purchase of 200,000 tons from the same source. Of course both lots would be sold on long term credits, and many Americans doubt that we ever will receive payment.

Of the wheat for China one-half will be turned into flour before it leaves the United States, in order to pacify the American millers. The shipments will be 50,000 tons monthly, the first to go before October 1. Carl Williams said American shipping lines would have a chance to carry this wheat and flour, but must meet competition; in other words, be willing to carry the grain across the Pacific at the lower rates bid by other lines.

MORE than sixty experts on rural problems met at the University of Chicago to try to formulate an economic policy for farm relief. Their sessions were behind closed doors, but those who consented to be interviewed between sessions held out little immediate encouragement for farmers, especially those depending on cotton and wheat.

The policies of the farm board came in for condemnation on the part of many representatives, who declared that the board's policy of discouraging production of such crops as wheat and cotton was detrimental.

CHILE'S naval mutiny ended almost as suddenly as it began and peace once more reigns in that country, officially, at least. The rebels, who objected to various government measures, held out until the air forces went into action against them. One hundred planes circled over the warships held by the mutineers, dropping bombs that sank some destroyers and damaged the battleship La Torre. Then literature was dropped telling the rebels they had no chance, so they gave up. Their officers, including Rear Admiral Gomez, commander of the fleet, were set free and resumed their commands and the craft were taken to Valparaiso and Port Tongoy.

Rear Admiral Gomez.

The government has started an investigation into the guilt of those involved, more than 2,700 enlisted men and petty officers. Other hundreds of men, some of them in the army, took part in the seizure of the bases at Talcahuano and Valparaiso. It is alleged that Communists stirred up the whole affair.

My wife has the same instant hot water service at home....

It saves her time and energy... It is inexpensive because of cheap Natural Gas

My wife doesn't play valet to a non-automatic water heater.

Instant hot water cleans two to twenty times faster. It therefore gives her hours of freedom each week for shopping or entertainment.

Furthermore, instant hot water costs less per gallon—this is especially true now because of cheap Natural Gas.

Automatic Gas Water Heater requires no watching

You never watch the Automatic Gas Water Heater. It heats the water to about 140 degrees, stores it, and turns itself off. All you ever do to get a basinful or a tubful of hot water is to turn the faucet any time of the day or night. The water stays hot because the boiler is insulated. No gas is wasted.

Stop in today at our office and see the Automatic Gas Water Heaters. You can have one installed in your home now for a small sum, the balance to be paid in monthly installments.

Dealers sell Automatic Gas Water Heaters.

KIWANIS NOTES
By Heck

Kiwanian spell - binders were interesting features of the luncheon today. The annual oratorical contest was on, and T. A. Cutting, A. S. Buell and Dr. F. R. Anderson did the honors, Dr. Anderson being winner to compete at the divisional contest at Los Angeles later. Judges were I. R. Abbott, G. E. Farley and H. C. Smith. "A Kiwanis Charge to a Newly Elected Kiwanian" was the theme and all contestants brought out some very interesting points.
